

JMHM Editorial Office Participates in the 2025 Annual Conference of the Health Communication Committee

Wenhuan Chen^{a*}

^aSchool of Journalism and Communication, Renmin University of China, Beijing, China

The 2025 Annual Conference of the Health Communication Committee under the Chinese Association for History of Journalism and Communication was successfully held on September 13 at Northwest Minzu University in Lanzhou, Gansu Province. Centered on the theme "Integration and Symbiosis: Concepts, Practices, and Innovations in Health Communication for the Digital-Intelligent Era," the conference attracted over a hundred invited scholars, experts, and industry representatives.

During the conference, Professor Xu Jing, editor of the Journal of Medicine, Humanity and Media (JMHM), and vice chair of the Health Communication Committee, delivered the annual work report, and introduced to JMHM to attendees.

JMHM currently invites submissions primarily from early-career researchers including graduate students. Moving forward, the journal will serve as a platform for regularly organizing academic lectures, research workshops, interviews with peer review experts, and thematic calls for papers. Furthermore, we welcome experts and scholars to propose and guest-edit special issues.